WOMEN EMPOWERMENT AND LEGAL PROTECTION IN INDIA

Women constitute almost 50 percent of world's population but in India has shown disproportionate sex ratio resulting in comparatively lower women population than men. Women secured equal status as men in Western societies but in India women are still suffering from gender inequalities and social discrimination. Efforts have been made by government and non-government institutions on a regular basis across nation to address this issue and enhance the socio-economic status of women. However, it has been observed that most of the policies and programs for empowerment of women focus on economic self-reliance of women ignoring other variables like health, education, literacy etc. Women's Empowerment has been an issue of immense discussions and contemplation over the last few decades world-wide. Empowerment is a multi-dimensional process, which enable women or group of women to realize their full identity and power in all spheres of life. In India a large number of women are suffering from evils like domestic violence, dowry, child marriage, human trafficking etc. Governments time to time took various step for empowering women through various constitutional as well as legal provisions.
